Autodesk Inventor 2013,Utorrent.by Frank Klep – As I have said in several posts, the foundation for the USA’s greatest strength as a global superpower is its reliance on an extraordinary level of domestic energy production. Without reliable supplies of energy, the United States would, in all probability, lack the ability to maintain sufficient manufacturing and productive capacity to sustain its domestic economy. This is especially true during a period of prolonged and multifaceted economic crisis.

Accordingly, one would not anticipate the nations of the Arab world to be in a position to defend or even compete against the United States on the battlefield of world energy production. This is not to say that the United States is not a major oil producer and global oil supplier. It is. However, a look at The Middle East oil map for production levels clearly illustrates the world's dependence on American oil production. As the following map illustrates, only America produces more than the rest of the world combined. The fact that the US is producing so much oil is due to a combination of geology, topography, culture,
