DMCA Policy.Q: How to make a task dependent on the result of another task in Cucumber/TestBed?

I am trying to make my tests dependent on the results of a task which sets up a database. We have a scenario which runs a set of scenarios: Feature: Admin ... Scenario Outline: Foo When I'm logged in Then the list of foods should be displayed Examples: | logged_in | | yes | | no | In the step definition for this scenario there is a block that is conditional: Then /^the list of foods should be displayed$/ do

  expected_menu_items = expected_menu_items + "foo" expect(page.cookies[:food_menu_items]).to eq(expected_menu_items) end

How do I make this dependent on the result of the setup task?

@spock.feature("steps.feature") do
  @spock.step("First the setup") { # How to make this dependent on result of the setup?
    page.cookies[:food_menu_items] = "foo" } @spock.step("then the step") { list_of_items = page.cookies[:food_menu_items]
    list_of_items.should include("foo") } end

A: Modify the setup step to be an @After hook. That way, all code within the @After block is only executed after the setup step finishes. To not run the setup step, it can be wrapped e79caf774b
