One of the best EDB converter which can convert EDB file into PST or EML files. What are EDB Files? To simplify things, an EDB file is like a folder. There's a special folder created by Exchange server to store the client's email messages. This folder may not have a different name from the mailbox itself but it is similar. EDB files are also similar to the other file type. EDB stands for Exchange Data Base. They are a type of MS Exchange format. Most often, the files are found in the folders like the Inbox, Sent Items, Deleted Items, etc. EDB File Structure: It seems impossible to remember the structure of EDB file. The best way to describe the structure is to say that it has three layers. Each layer is further divided into folders. Each folder contains another set of folders. In turn, each of those folders contains data. The main folder name is Inbox. It is a grandparent for Inboxes. It's followed by Outbox, Sent Items and Deleted Items. Now, the individual mailbox is called Items. It is the child of Inbox folder and Outbox folder. It's followed by All Items folder and Junk E-Mail folder. The rest of the folders are all a child of this. How to Convert Exchange EDB to PST?
